Marine Stewardship Council & Aquaculture Stewardship Council

Greenland Seafood supports the responsible handling of fish stocks in its sustainable management and purchasing strategy for the preservation of marine resources.

The Marine Stewardship Council is an international non-profit organization established to address the problem of overfishing and safeguard supplies for the future. The Aquaculture Stewardship Council is also an international non-profit organization that manages the world's leading certification and labelling programme for responsible aquaculture.

Fisheries that can demonstrate that they catch fish and seafood sustainably according to the MSC and ASC standard are allowed to mark their catch with the MSC and ASC seal. Greenland Seafood Europe produces many products from MSC and ASC certified raw materials in its factories, which are also certified according to the MSC and ASC traceability standard.
